Navy: In the Naval Chapel, at Annapolis, MD., Before the Lawrence Literary Society, October 30, 1858
Gentlemen of the Lawrence Literary Society: The life of Admiral Collingwood, is the theme I have chosen for the lecture this evening. It is eminently suggestive, rich in incident and sublime in morals. Born in the most eventful era of the world's history, the contemporary and warm bosom friend of Nelson, the proudest name known to the Naval history of the world, unless we except his own, which we hope to be able to prove, all things considered, was second to none; he filled up the measure of his country's glory, and proved himself more than equal to the exciting and thrilling exigencies of the times. He was born on the 26th of September, 1750. At the tender age of eleven, he entered the British Navy, under the care of Admirals Brathwaite and Roddam, officers who felt the magnitude and responsibility of their charge, and fondly cherished the boyhood, whose manhood was destined to illustrate so gloriously England's heroism on the seas. It is somewhat remarkable, my countrymen, that when the thunders of our gallant little army, undisciplined in war, poorly clad and but illy equipped, were making their first echoes on the bloody plains of Lexington, and when Bunker Hill shook beneath the tread of freemen, who spurned the despot's chain, Collingwood was raised to the rank of Lieutenant, within sight of the curling smoke and sound of the muttering cannon.
