He refused to trot. An amble was all I could get out of the dear little chap, and he shook his old head as if with laughter, and seemed to say Go for him, Matt: dont let him go till hes down and out; and so I kept on hammering away at your fathers monstrous philosophy and all the absurd hypotheses of modern science, till his watch came out every three minutes and his face was as long as a barometer. Mary found that the curry was eatable and that the rice taken by itself was even faintly reminiscent of honey-dew and the milk of Paradise. Presently, continued Mr. Barnet, I challenged your father with the question, whether it was more important that he should catch a train or save his soul from intellectual perdition He insisted that his appointment was a matter of importance. I retorted that no man of science in London could tell him what Nature was trying to tell him in the country at that very moment. Look at the beauty all round you, I cried, look at all the glorious order! At last, so fearful was he of missing his train, he confided to me that his appointment had nothing to do with science or philosophy, in fact that it was a luncheon engagement at the Berkeley Restaurant. I laid the whip across the right shoulder of Toddles, and asked if Mrs. Diggle was to be...
